

MEDITERRANEAN OIL FIELD

New Petroleum District Recently
Opened in Central Sicily by English Company.

It is curious that although the existence of oil in Sicily, especially in the district of Nicosia, in central Sicily, has been known for centuries, very little has been done to develop the industry.

With the exception of a short and inconclusive experiment made by a French company 18 months ago, no boring for petroleum has taken place in the island until the inception a few months ago of regular boring by an English company which has taken up a large area near Nicosia.

This boring is still in the preliminary stages, but the indications are most promising, and surface investigations have produced most remarkable results. A large extent of oil rock and some oil-bearing shales have been discovered, and in one place a spring of surface petroleum of good quality has been found by means of a tunnel driven 30 feet into sandstone rock. Similar discoveries have been made in other parts of Sicily, and a German syndicate will begin boring very shortly in the southeast. At Nicosia petroleum indications are on a large scale, the physical conformation of the country being favorable to the presence of enormous quantities.

The importance of large deposits of petroleum on an island in the middle of the Mediterranean cannot be easily overestimated for war purposes, now that war vessels of all types and nationalities are to be adapted to consume oil fuel.

What "Honeymoon" Means.
It was a custom among the old Teutonic tribes to drink of diluted honey for thirty days, or a moon's age, after a wedding, and from this custom came the expression a honeymoon. Attilla the Hun drank it, it is said, so freely of hydromel on his marriage day that he died of suffocation.
